

The things I write about are my own opinions, observations, and insights. By no means should you mistake the information provided here as qualified professional advice. My motive is to offer information, perspective, and thought provoking content that you can take to your doctor in order to start a discussion about your health. I want you to get interested in your health and realize that you have the power to take your health into your own hands. Before you start a new diet, a new exercise routine, or make dramatic changes to your lifestyle, please consult a proper qualified professional whom you trust and discuss your plans so she is aware of your plan and can monitor your progress. Ask questions and question answers.

I am a participant in the Amazon Services LLC Associates Program, an affiliate advertising program designed to provide a means for me to earn fees by linking to Amazon.com and affiliated sites.

There may be links to other sites that I am affiliated with as well, such as Bulletproof, Dry Farms Wines, MindGourmet, Young Living, and Plexus. I do not link to products or businesses that I do not find useful. I only affiliate with companies whose products and business practices align with my own. If a company changes its business practices or products and becomes something I do not agree with, I will remove them from my affiliations. Anything that I promote is something that I personally use and find valuable.

My opinions are always my own. If you purchase a product through an affiliate link, I make a small commission - at no cost to you - which helps keep this blog running and my other content free. It also helps me provide for my family while I pass valuable information on to you for free. If my affiliate sites offer any discounts or promo codes, I will pass those along to you at every opportunity.